MY LORD, AND GENTLEMEN,

THE present Publication, intended for the Information and Utility of the Inhabitants; as well as of Strangers resorting to this Metropolis, cannot be dedicated to any, with so much propriety, as to you, My Lord and Gentlemen, to whom the present generation owe much for your spirited attention to the Police and Preservation of good Order in the City, and to the Promotion of every public good; and to whom future ages will look back with venerable respect, while they contemplate the great and grand Improvements now carried on, and that the magnificent Buildings of the new College for the University of Edinburgh, long and justly celebrated as the first seminary of Learning in the world, were begun during your administration: To yourselves this must afford a most pleasing reflection; and this opportunity of professing my great respect for a Magistracy and Council, so highly deserving the approbation of your fellow citizens, yields a pleasure truly Sincere to,

MY LORD, AND GENTLEMEN,

Your much obliged, most obedient,

And very humble servant,

P. WILLIAMSON.

THAT the great Trouble and Expence the compiler of this work is at in collecting the names and places of abode of each Inhabitant puts it out of his power to publish a new Directory every year. But if the citizens were attentive to give in their names to the publisher, it would add much to their advantage, and lessen the expence of this publication. and put it upon a Footing usefull to the purchasers who are in daily need of it.

And have found the good effect from it these Twenty years past, by the plain Direction therein given of all the People in business private and public within a Mile of the City of Edinburgh. Leith, &c. By which arrangement the person wanted, can be found out with little trouble or enquiry after them, as you have the streets, squares, wynds, Cloffs, Lanes, &c pointed out, with the Number of each houle of such as have them numbered.
